

Overseas Units

Overview

- Overseas units - similarities and differences
- Role of AF installation/CC in selecting CAP SQ/CC
- Restrictions and limitations imposed by directives

Overseas Units

Overseas vs stateside units

Similarities

Overseas Units

Overseas vs stateside units

Differences

Overseas Units

AF installation commander

The CAP charter request and the appointment of the squadron commander for an overseas unit are at the discretion of the AF Installation commander, not a CAP wing commander. Overseas units report to NHQ.

Overseas Units

Directives

How they influence actions:

- AFI 10-2701
- CAPR 35-4
- SOFA

Overseas Units

Overseas cadet programs viability & success

- Issues
- challenges

Overseas Units

Overseas units-ideas

Exchange ideas on how to develop a strong senior and cadet program in compliance with AFI, CAPR, SOFA and AF installation requirements.

Overseas Units

Overseas unit recruiting-ideas

- Where to recruit seniors and cadets
- How to recruit seniors and cadets

Overseas Units

Taking command of an overseas unit

- Only Active Duty military personnel are eligible to serve as CAP SQ/CCs
- Overseas SQ/CCs may perform all the actions which any Wing/CC may, provided they are in compliance with AFI 10-2701, CAPR 35-4, SOFA, and AF Installation commander's instructions
- Discuss individual concerns and challenges with becoming an overseas cadet squadron commander

Overseas Units

Overseas command

- While there are many similarities between the obligations of commanders, whether of stateside or overseas units, there are significant differences to which an overseas commander must adhere
- All overseas units must be located on an Air Force Installation, and may only be cadet squadrons
- In addition, flights may not be chartered overseas

Overseas Units

Summary

- Overseas units - similarities and differences
- Role of AF installation/CC in selecting CAP SQ/CC
- Restrictions and limitations imposed by directives

Overseas Units

Closing

For a CAP senior member who is willing to face the challenges of becoming and remaining an overseas squadron commander, the rewards can be extraordinary, never to be forgotten, and unparalleled as a overseas squadron commander.

So Go For It!

Overseas Units

Questions & Answers